						Expanding Community Services, Washington State Department of Social & Health Services, Mental Health Division At the national and state level, there is continued pressure to assure that individuals residing in institutions have the option for community living. These efforts have been highlighted through litigation such as the Olmstead lawsuit in Georgia where the Supreme Court found that the state was violating the rights of two plaintiffs by keeping them in a state psychiatric hospital despite their desire to live in the community. As part of the 2001-2003 budget process, DSHS developed a proposal included in the Governor's budget for serving state hospital patients in community settings. The 2001-2003 Operating Budget supported this proposal by providing for the development and operation of community support services for long term Western State Hospital (WSH) patients who no longer required active inpatient psychiatric treatment. The 2002-2003 Supplemental Budget increased the scope of the project to include patients from Eastern State Hospital (ESH) and residents of the Program for Adaptive Living Skills (PALS) on the grounds of WSH. In accordance with the proviso, the Department of Social and Health Services (DSHS) formally implemented the Expanding Community Services (ECS) initiative. http://www.dshs.wa.gov/mentalhealth/ecs.shtml System Transformation Initiative, Presentation for the Washington State House Committee on Health Care and Wellness, January 24, 2008 http://www.dshs.wa.gov/pdf/hrsa/mh/sti_presentation_for_1_24_hearing_final.pdf System Transformation Initiative, Department of Social and Health Services http://www.dshs.wa.gov/Mentalhealth/STI_Main.shtml

Project Out is a key component of Wyoming's Olmstead Plan, and provides Medicaid eligible individuals, who are residing in nursing homes or are at risk of residing in a nursing home, the opportunity to live in the community, rather than in an institution. In previous years, Project Out was funded through a CMS grant, which was administered the Aging Division and piloted by one provider. Because of its success, beginning July 1, 2006, Project Out is now funded by a mix of state and federal dollars through the Wyoming Medicaid Program. http://wdh.state.wy.us/aging/matrix.html Wyoming Department of Health, Aging Division Four Year State Plan (2006-2010): http://wdh.state.wy.us/Media.aspx?mediaId=4244
